FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

September gone by, here comes the month of October - a season full of festivities and events. The air around different cities gets spiked with chatter and spices. Let it be the Navratri Thali or the delicacies like fried chicken, phirni, Macher jhol, Sandesh or sevai- it's a feast time all across with multitude of culinary delights!

The mood around the nation itself talks of us being a 'secular' country. At WLCI, September is also time of new beginnings for many. The Buzz team takes this opportunity to welcome all the new entrants to the WLCI family and also our existing students progressing to higher modules. May you build long lasting friendships, learn real lessons, gain knowledge and achieve success in your goals that you set for yourselves during the course of study.

All for the month of September, doesn't end here. In this month we have also had Teacher's Day, International Peace Day- and the celebrations for same were done by various campuses of WLC.

So by now, you must have understood the theme of this month's newsletter. It's SECULAR. Full of colors and bonhomie!

STUDENT CONTRIBUTION

PRESENTATION SKILLS by Arjun Krishnadas, ACL I, WLC Bangalore

When students get into the professional phase of their life, they will be exposed to various platforms where many things are considered. One of the most important criteria is the presentation skill that an individual has. The impact of this presentation makes an individual popular or known amongst the various groups. Do an individual require this skill or is presentation really a skill?

The answer to this question is yes. Presentation is exactly a skill which an individual should develop. Whether he is a technical person or a management person, he should have this skill. Presentation skill is the way we present ourselves in front of others and the way we express our ideas. It is also the way which a person uses to convince others and set a milestone where he is recognized. The factors that we have to adopt or develop in order to have a good presentation skill are: • Communication • Confidence • Leadership • Accuracy • Knowledge • Pleasant smile • Focus • Personality • Dictatorship • Motivation • Body Language

The way we deliver the speech or give the presentation, it should resemble a roaring lion and not whining cat. There is a difference in both and we should make it a point that we make the difference and we set the mark. Here sound modulation helps a lot. While giving a presentation, the pitch and volume of the sound should be very well controlled. After that comes the eye contact. This comes under the body language, but still, I am stressing on eye contact because that is very important. When talking to a person, we should maintain the eye contact and should look into the person's eyes. While speaking to a group, we should look at all the areas.

We can imagine the deliveries both these people would give. That is the importance of good presentation skills.
